

Data Sovereignty Statement

Thank you for bringing your expertise, insights and lived experience to the summit.

We will listen, learn and work with you in ways that are respectful and culturally safe. This summit is for sharing high-level ideas and perspectives, not personal stories. It will help us build a stronger shared understanding of place-based approaches and the different ways people think about impact. Through interactive sessions, we invite participants to contribute their perspectives and experience to this shared work.

The PLACE team and our Summit facilitators, Orange Compass, will collect, store and bring together information shared during the summit, documenting key ideas and discussion points. This includes notes, activity group outputs and some audio and video recording of the plenary presentations.

We recognise that some knowledge shared may be personal, cultural or connected to community. We will handle all information with care, and we will not include identifying or culturally sensitive information in any of the Summit outputs without express consent.

We will use the information collected throughout the two days of the Summit to:

- Gather feedback and insights throughout the Summit
- Make improvements to the Summit design in real time
- Develop a Summit Report that can be shared widely, including the key insights and recommendations
- Support PLACE's ongoing work in supporting the development of a shared approach to understanding and measuring the impact of place-based approaches.

We will share the Summit Report with participants, which will be presented in ways that are useful and accessible.

Photography will take place during the summit. We will avoid portrait-style images unless there is clear agreement. If you do not want to be photographed or recorded, please tell us at registration or at any time during the event.

You decide how you participate and how much you choose to share. The event app will also let you choose what personal information you provide and how it is shared.

And if at any time, you have any questions, concerns or there are contributions you do not want documented or shared, let a PLACE team member know.

Thank you, we look forward to learning alongside you over the coming two days and beyond.
